Published annually by the journalism students for the student body of Oakland Technical High School, Oakland, California.

Let these majestic buildings serve as your inspiration

Here are the two most outstanding buildings in Oakland, California. Oakland Technical High School exemplifies the elegance of classic Greek architecture; Kaiser Center, the largest and most modern skyscraper west of Chicago, is a complex of steel, glass, aluminum, and dolomite.

Almost half a century separates the construction of these two beautiful landmarks. Each has been prominent in the history of Oakland's development. As they stand silhouetted against the sky, these two "beauties" represent the dreams of people who worked, created and produced . . . the symbols of human endeavor.

for they are concrete symbols of man's work and dreams

Portrait of America: Our school . . . and We, the people . . .

Have a dream . . Work hard . . Make the dream come true . .

Dedicated:

To a father and son . . . the team which has created an industrial empire. Henry J. Kaiser and his son Edgar F. Kaiser have built and nurtured an enterprise that has become so enormous its vastness can only be estimated. This reality was founded on a dream . . . a dream realized through hard work, daring, determination, and imaginative thinking.

As the success of these gentlemen mounted so did their benevolence to their community and their country. They instituted hospitals and schools, inspired medical and industrial researchers, and created thousands of jobs for men and women throughout the United States and the world. As a by-product of their work and dreams . . . came the work and dreams of others. Now the dream is ours.

Edgar F. Kaiser (left) president, Kaiser Industries Corporation, and his father, Henry J. Kaiser, founder and chairman of the board of this vigorous corporation.

"The measure of business and personal success and growth is the quality . . . and the degree of service we give our fellow man."

—Edgar F Kaiser

Curriculum

Although we often regard school as a source of fun and social activity, its primary function is as a place of learning. Modern education has taken great strides forward in its role as America's largest and most rapidly growing industry. The finished product is, hopefully, a responsible, mature person, sufficiently prepared to meet the challenges of adult life.

As we worked toward "that special dream," there were many new developments taking place in our school. From team teaching in math and science, to Russian, to leadership classes, and back to calculus, everyone benefited from the new facilities and was inspired by the new educational opportunities. To our teachers and to the community that provided education . . . we are grateful.

There are many forms of creativity. John Dows demonstrates the use of wood to create line and form.

At Tech, creative minds find opportunities for expression and fulfillment through constructive activity

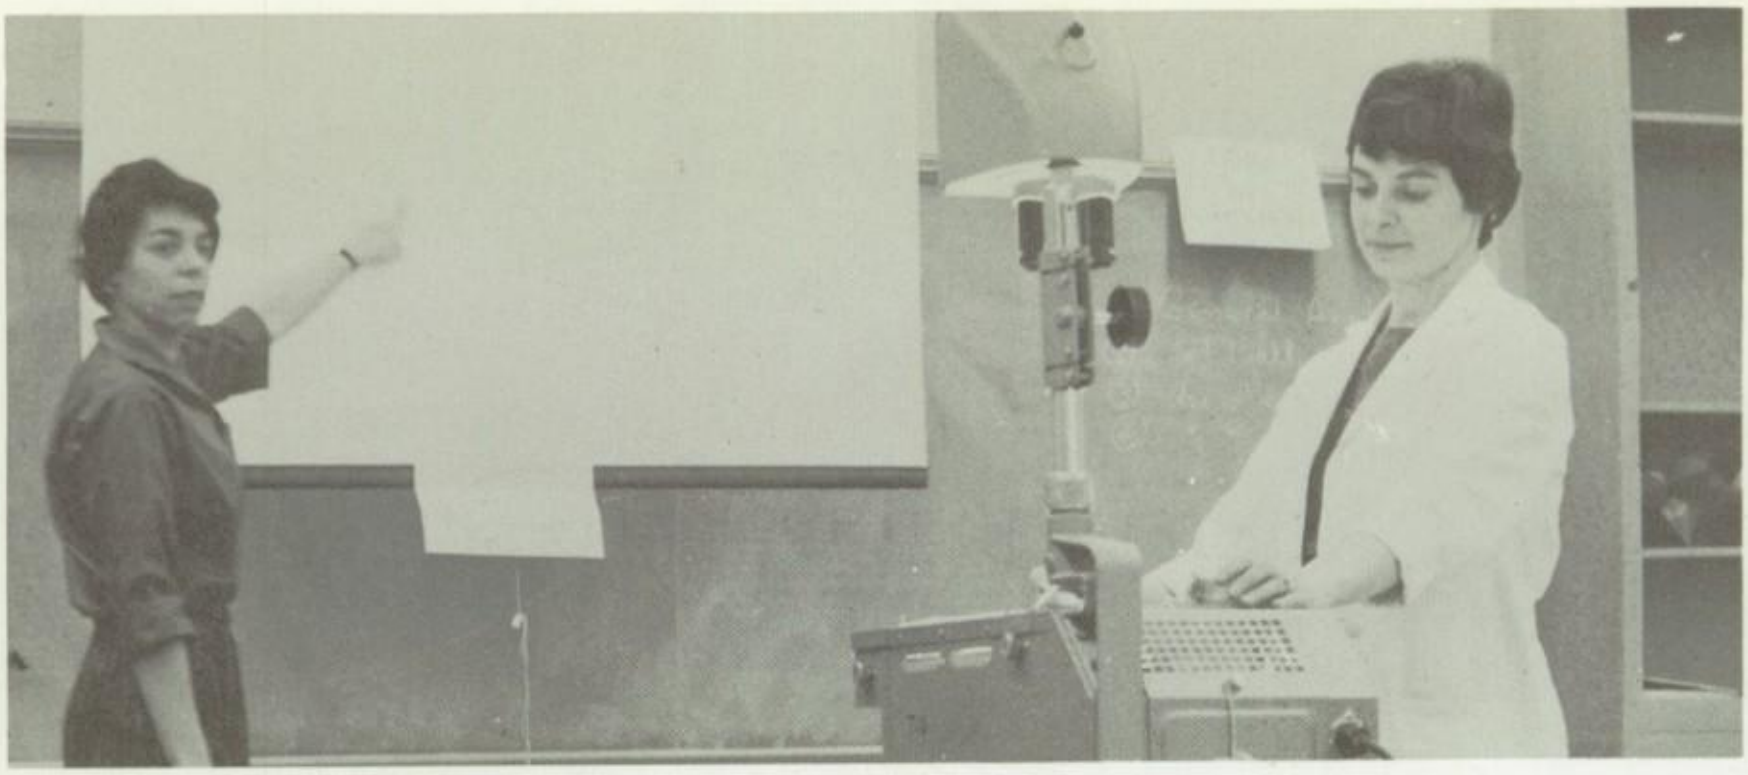
Self expression is the creative part of learning. If students allow their minds to wander beyond the written page they will emerge with a more valuable education. With the many opportunities offered at Tech in the creative arts, there are avenues open as a means of escape from the mediocre.

Chris Olsen meticulously working on Talisman.



Mrs. Mary Smith and Mrs. Jean Williams demonstrating the techniques of team-teaching.

At Tech team-teaching is being used in the math department, especially the geometry class. The two teachers, Mrs. Jean Williams and Mrs. Mary Smith, are able to give the students more individual help with their work.

In this course, geometry is taught with greater emphasis on numbers. This method makes the principles of geometry easier to learn. The goals of the team-teaching system are to make it easier for students to learn, to find better ways of using the teacher's time, and to aid in simplifying difficult courses.

Now hear this: The formula of the future is math

Science is the field of discovery

Evelyn Lotter, Deems Urquhart, Georgia Newman, Jackie Quinn, and a friend.

With the advancement in education, progress came to Tech. Our school was chosen as the only one in Oakland to test a new biology curriculum. The first goal of the Biological Sciences Curriculum Study was to contribute to the improvement of biological education at the high school.

Participating students were enthusiastic and eager to explore fields not included in the traditional course. Laboratory work was emphasized, and Mr. Frank Jacobs, the instructor, was always on hand to either remedy confusion or suggest new problems for investigation.

Good English leads to a better life! The largest department in Tech is the English department. Offering a wide variety of classes, the English department tries to give everyone a thorough knowledge of speaking and writing English effectively. In addition to popular and classic literature, poetry, and grammar, the emphasis is strong on such subjects as vocabulary.

world is drawn together in unity

Daily practice in listening and repetition was the most important aspect of the first year Russian course taught by Mr. Otis Handy. To help increase their knowledge of Soviet affairs, twelve Tech students participated in the class.

The Audio-Lingual approach to foreign languages was followed, consisting of listening and speaking with a de-emphasis on reading and writing. From the very beginning no English was spoken so that confidence in understanding and speaking could be built up without the interference of English speaking habits.

The course was of benefit to all those involved, and work will continue as a full four-year program is developed in the near future. The Soviet Union is a long way away, but twelve Tech students brought it a little closer!

Due to the overlapping of course material in the humanities, the English and history departments have joined forces. Mrs. Smeltzer's 11th grade English class and Mr. McKay's U.S. History class now issue identical reading lists. This system simplifies the old game of "killing two birds with one stone." Now the books read for one class are intended to be used for the other. Greater learning is the result.

Students learn the skills of homemaking

Every girl dreams of having her own home someday . . . but will she know how to take care of it? Those students in the homemaking department are preparing themselves to assume this responsibility. They are learning the fundamentals of home management, which, at times, can be as intricate as that of a large hotel.

Jerry Beaman is one of Tech's outstanding students.

The unique and the useful are an integral part of Tech's curriculum

Tech offers many unique educational opportunities, but probably its most unparalleled section is the special education department. Tech is the only Oakland high school which has a complete program for blind students, including the service of student readers. These readers help them complete their homework and spur them on toward new goals.

Modern business offices require specialized skills and the ability to work with people

At Tech High students are prepared for the sleek, competitive business world. Tech has a strong and progressive business department. Besides offering the usual typing, bookkeeping, and shorthand, the business department offers a class called note-taking. This class is designed to teach college preparatory students the efficient and effective way to take notes. Courses like these are one of the many "extras" offered at Tech.

Success is found through industry

Larry Dillon and Lennis March are sure that it will start again!

As its name suggests, Technical High has an outstanding industrial arts department. Any student interested in a trade, can find an appropriate class in the "shops wing." A few of the many shop classes offered are wood, metal, aircraft, electrical, and auto.

The shapes of tomorrow become realities on the drawing board. Today's mechanical drawing students are taught all the techniques of technical drawing so that they will be able to diagram the complex structures of the future. Drafting is a fundamental for all students interested in design.

Healthy bodies stimulate healthy minds

Health, is the spice of life! Under this motto, Tech's physical education teachers fearlessly cope with the problems of the so-called "unfit" American youth. Among the many special classes offered in this department is the modern dance class. Primarily for girls, the modern dance class emphasizes coordination and physical fitness, grace, and poise.

Expression of ideas is related with art and music

The theatrical arts have experienced a big boost with the addition of the new auditorium and music rooms. New facilities make possible new opportunities which give valuable experience to both Mr. Harry Spencer's choirs, and Mr. Eeds' orchestra.

Mr. Thomas Whayne also uses the auditorium to full advantage by constantly planning plays and skits for his drama classes. The rest of the student body also benefits from the cultural experiences in addition to the pleasure of watching the finished productions.

Counselors direct us to our goals

Counselors suites buzzing with activities.

"Plan ahead" is the prevailing motto in the counselors' suites. Under the guidance of the counselors, Tech students follow the right path to their personal goals. The counselors are a source of valuable information for college-bound students and an employment center for many others.

American Field Service — custom, culture, cooperation

When the American Field Service program was started in 1948 the purpose was to bring students from the rest of the world to America. The students returned to their homes and organized the exchange program, which enabled American students to spend time in schools of foreign countries. Thus began the exchange program.

The AFS students are chosen by a panel of students, PTA members, and members of the community. Along with the AFS, other countries organize programs to send students to America to obtain a liberal arts education.

Through this education, the students are able to take home with them new ideas and an appreciation of the United States.

John F. Borum . . . the nucleus of Tech

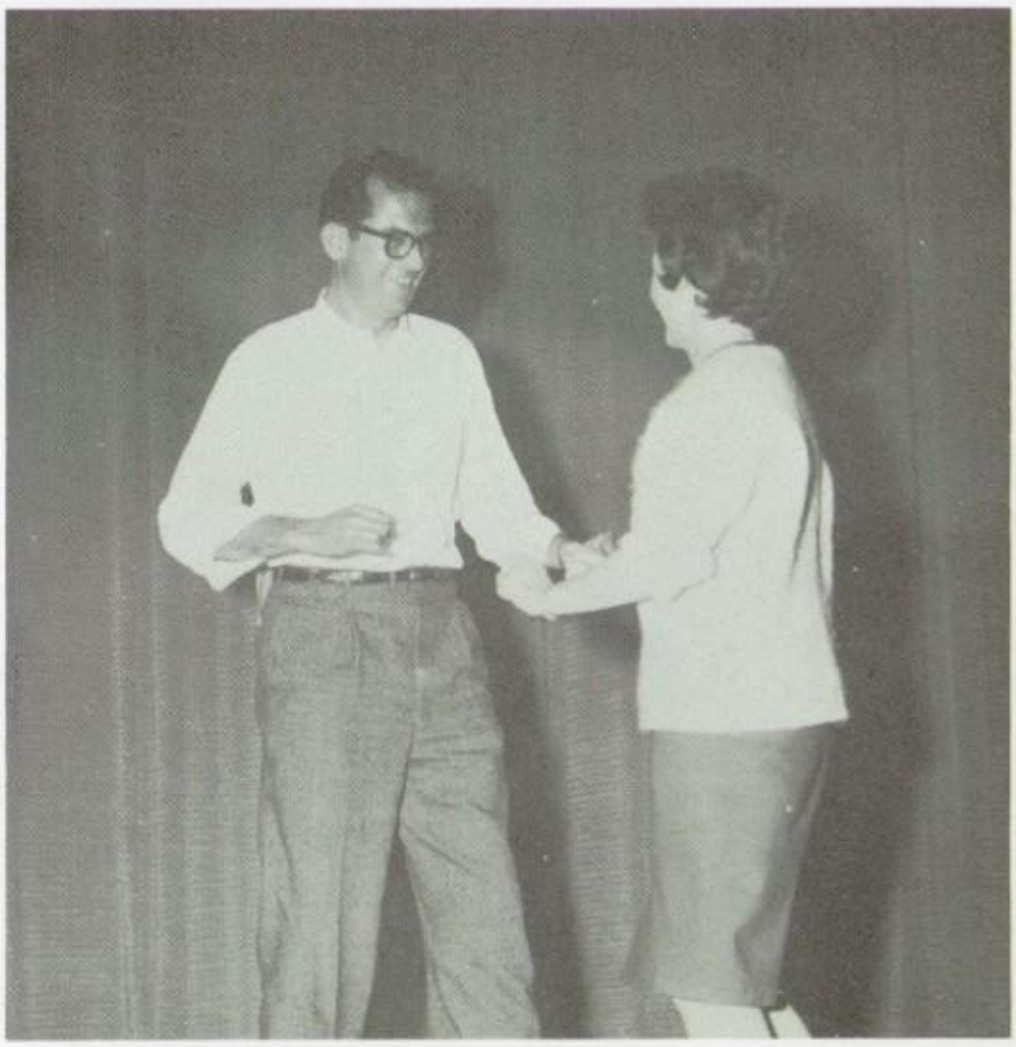
Mr. Borum, tall man in a hurry.

Mr. John Borum is Tech's foremost representative. During the past year our principal has innovated many modern ideas. He is constantly upgrading the curriculum and perpetuating Tech's high scholastic reputation.

Mr. Borum was delegated by Superintendent Phillips to represent the Oakland High Schools at a conference in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Tech's principal has been a prime factor in creating the Tech Scholarship Fund. More visual improvements are the school's new exterior paint and completion of the football field under his administration. We are proud, also, of the many academic achievements inspired by him.

Mr. Borum still finds time to stop and talk with students.



Our Principal learned to twist for "The Big Show" to raise money for the Tech Scholarship Fund.

Tech's pillars of perseverance!

More than just "pillars of perseverance," Miss Valerie Brenan and Mr. Joe Woolfson stand as real foundations of Tech's progress. Acting as Tech's vice principals, they have proven their capabilities by competently handling the probems of students, faculty, and parents.

Efficient management is the key to their success, as both Miss Brenan and Mr. Woolfson are fundamental parts of the school organization.

Seniors

Oh, how we worked for that diploma—that was our first dream! We dreamed of walking up to the platform to receive that certificate which marked the successful completion of three years of hard work—the last three years of our secondary education.

In reality this was just the beginning of a much bigger and more significant dream.

Each of us sees himself in a certain role in life. Some of us will have realized our ambition by June, 1963. For others it may take many years. It doesn't matter; we will all find our own place in the ever-quickening pace of tomorrow. And these, our own private, individual dreams are the goals for which, perhaps subconsciously, we have been striving since the beginning of our school lives.

In the presence of a true hero there is an overwhelming sense of pride. General William F. Dean, hero of the Korean War, presented senior Allan Brattesani with an award for outstanding achievement in the R.O.T.C. program, and as their hands met, we were proud to be Americans.

There were many opportunities for every student to take part in planning activities. The jobs were numerous and volunteers were needed. Special meetings entailed long hours of work over the committee table.

All senior events—Dinner, Reception, Day, Picnic, and, of course, the Ball—were all skillfully mapped out weeks ahead of time. And what would the class of '63 have done without these able and efficient organizers? Fortunately, they didn't have to worry, for everyone was willing to pitch in and help.

The first two years of high school life embodied a heterogeneous group of students bound only by one fact—that we would ultimately be Seniors. In the fall the gradual stirring of class spirit unified us.

It was the task of Senior fall officers to guide this spirit and to prepare Seniors for the activities leading toward graduation.

Graduation and all the special activities surrounding it were the direct responsibility of the Senior spring officers. There were many plans to make and obligations to fulfill.

The Senior Class expected great results, and we were satisfied. The Senior Ball appropriately climaxed a year of farewell events. Graduation night was a memorable culmination of three years of hopes and dreams.

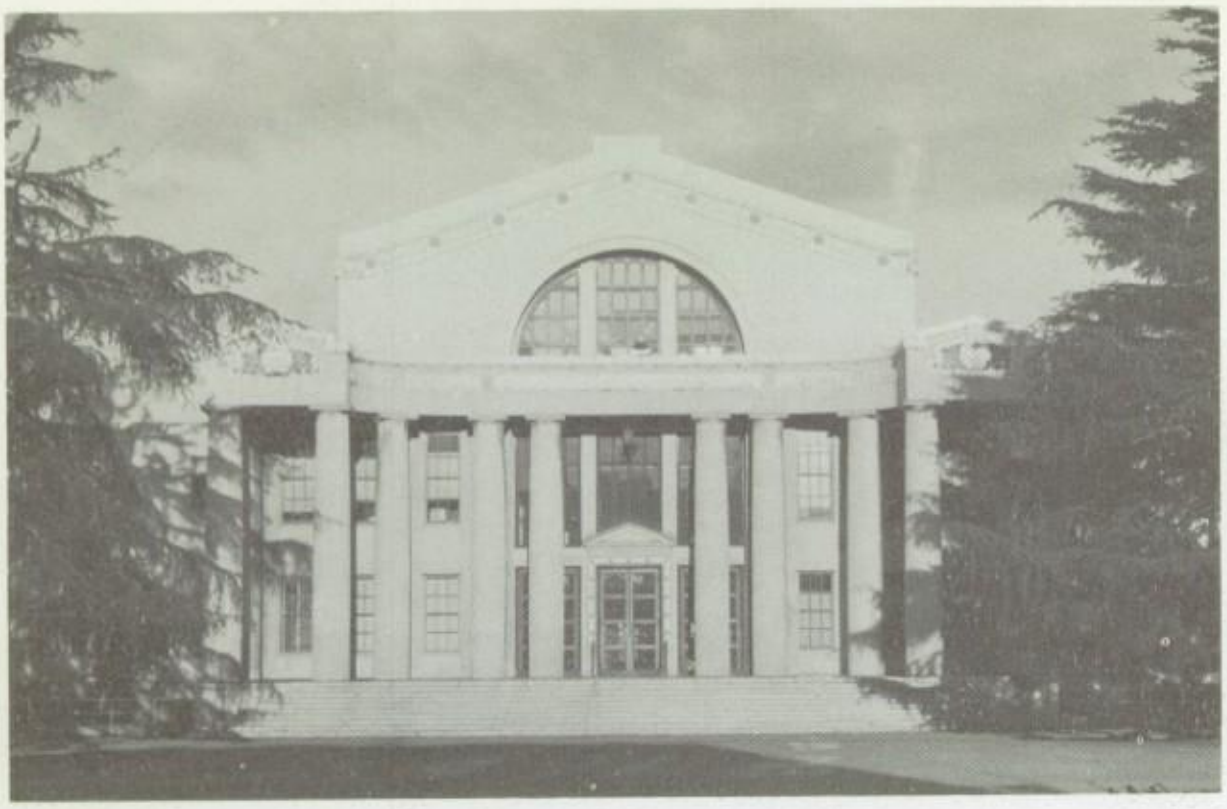
Activities

The pound of the gavel called many early-morning Representative Assembly and Executive Board meetings to order. Its purpose was to set the wheels of Tech's student government into motion. To be a member of the Executive Board was the dream of every loyal Technite, for this board directed and presided over all Student Body functions.

New friends were made as the members of Tech's many clubs worked together to raise money, serve their school, and at the same time enjoy themselves. All students were welcome. Curiosity led to participation, and kept that Tech spirit soaring.



The school building embodies the spirit of all activities. Standing upright and tall, it displays the feeling of fair play and pride which goes hand in hand with all student affairs. The student leaders of Tech are aware of the tradition which they must uphold, and the Executive Boards strive to maintain this standard.

The dreams and ambitions of many students are recognized in the Executive Board of each semester. The problems of the outside world, which will be faced in the future, are symbolized in these two groups of students, interested in promoting the goals of the school. The glory received from being a "Big Man on Campus" often does not compensate for the pressure of academic responsibilities.

Inside the doors of Tech, a government exists to serve the students. The power behind student government is for the benefit of all members.

The Legislative branch provided progressive ideas and responsible acts

The Representative Assembly, consisting of one member from each homeroom and club, is comparable to the House of Representatives in Washington, D. C. It determines, with the approval of the Executive Board, the school budget and approves school activities, such as the Scribe Mistletoe Sale and the American Field Service Chistmas card sale. An improvement which was deemed necessary for many years was enacted when the task of revising the Tech Constitution was also undertaken by the Representative Assembly.

The Student Court tried the recipients of student citations, distributing various punishments for misdemeanors.

for a better school

The Social Activities Board planned; the Publicity Board publicized; the Maintenance Boards cleaned up. For the Fall Social Activities, the big event was the Christmas Dance. Under the Spring Social Activities Board many other successful events were planned and executed. A completely new idea, "Zorch Day," when students wear unmatched prints and colors that clash, was innovated into a Tech tradition.

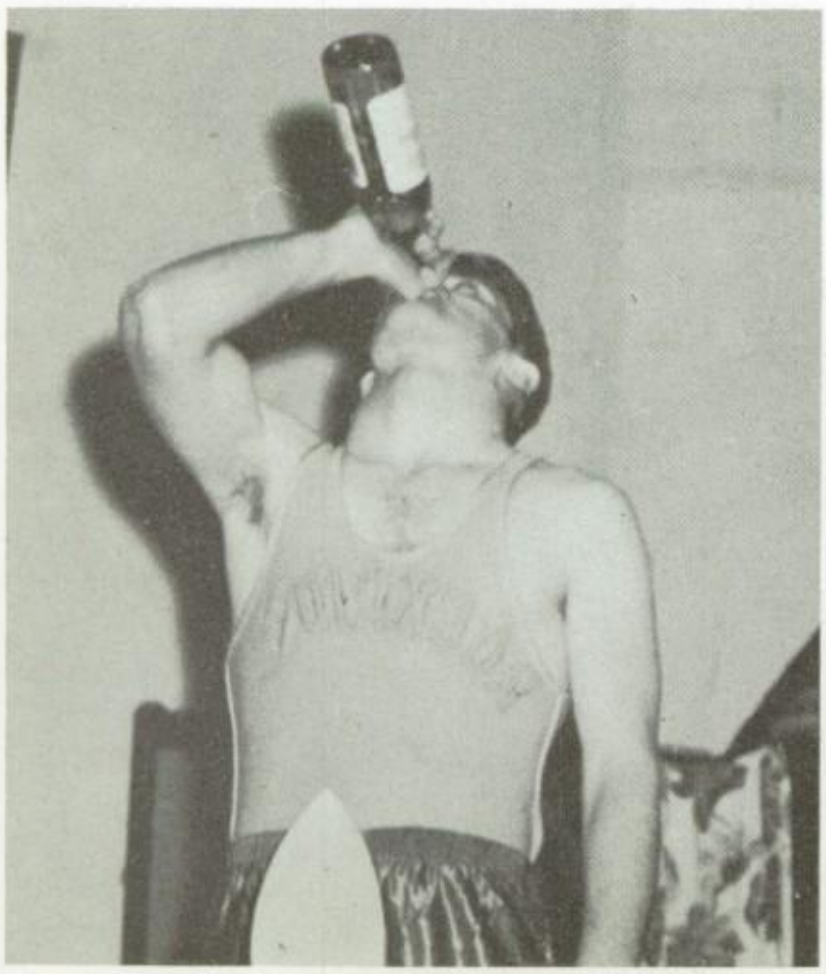
The transition from youth to adult is a period of joys and frustrations, of living for today and only thinking of tomorrow.

The faces of youth as they play reflect the emotions and drives of this difficult time.

Activities offer a release, an escape, and as we sing and act and dance we are happy and there is no fear of tomorrow, for we are today!

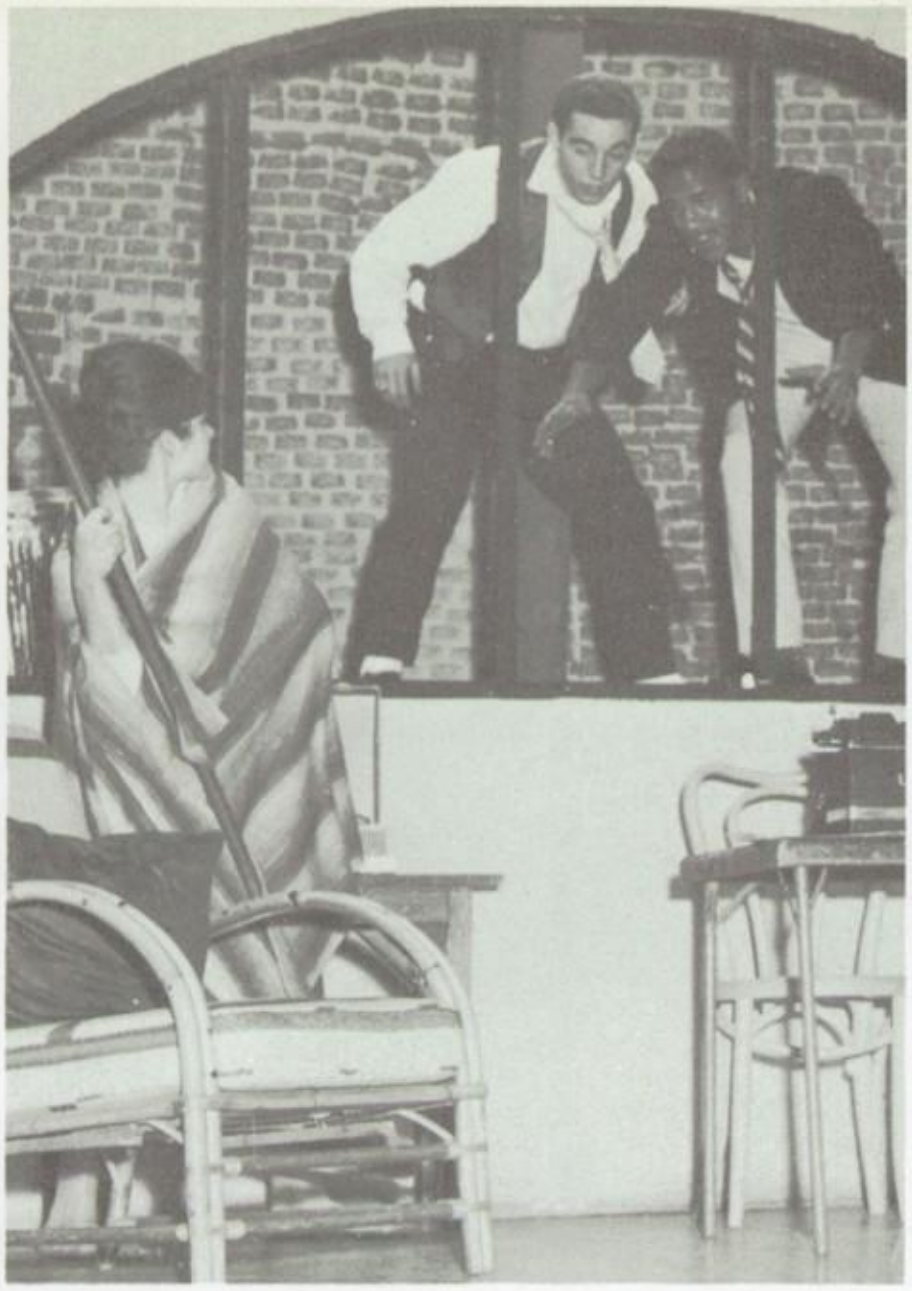
Linda Martin and Sally Passafiume, the "yokels" of the Nutrition assembly

The nonsense . . . the habits . . . the rhythms . . .

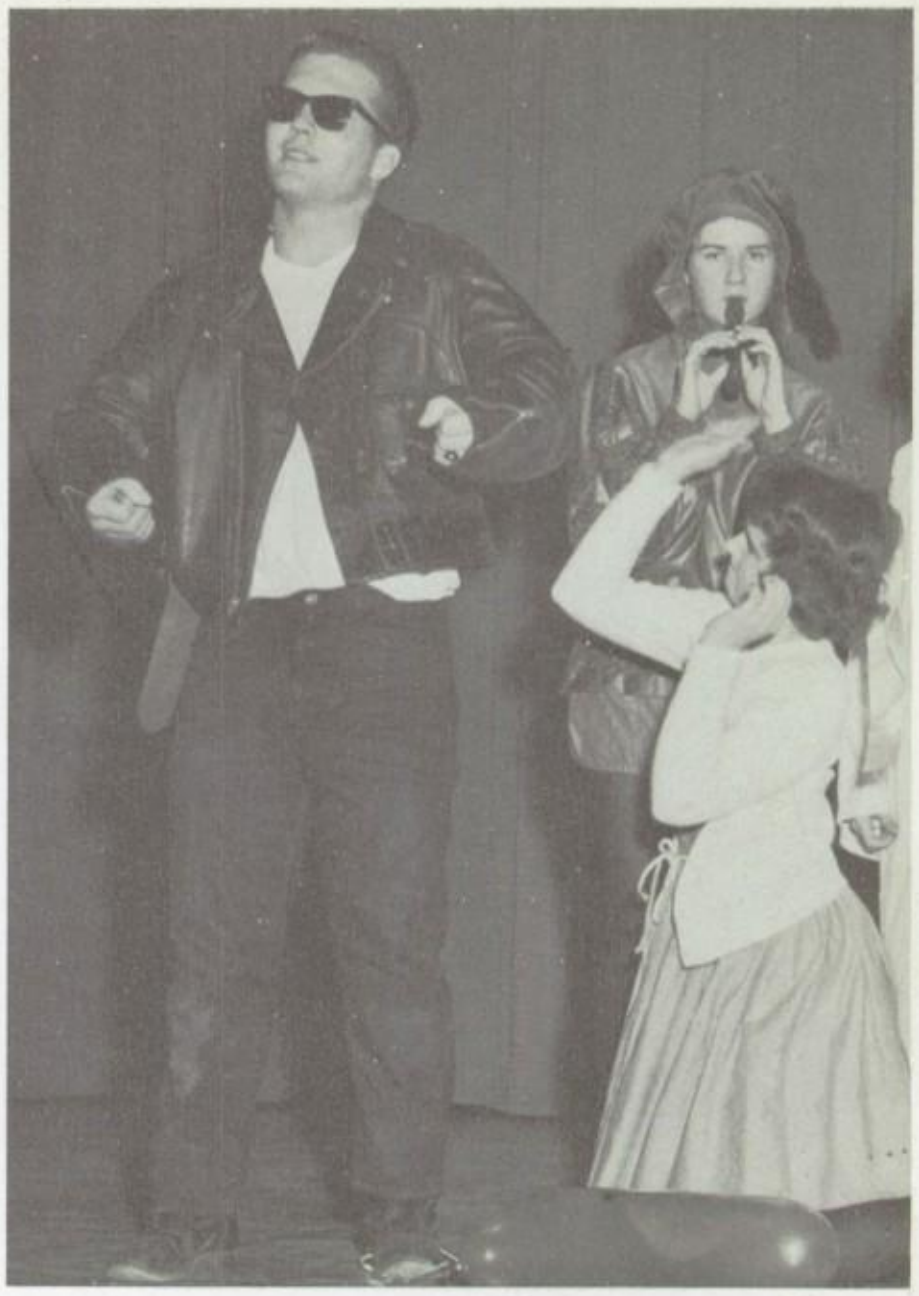


Ken Pedigo relaxes in the term play, "My Sister Eileen"

Dave Searcy sets the beat for the Dance Band



Mary Scholz and admirers in "My Sister Eileen"



The Nutrition Assembly brought out Technites' true personalities

The desires . . . the moods . . . and the joys of being young

"Patterns in Tone" left everybody happy

What a term play! The audience was rolling in the aisles!

Ken Pedigro fit his part in the term play perfectly

Linda Martin and Mary Scholz played the role of Eileen and her sister

The unique and the unusual at Tech

The audience thought the play was hilarious

Les Perry played the part of Frankie superbly

As they say in Hollywood, "My Sister Eileen" was a gasser . . . in other words sold out and a smash hit. It was high comedy with a touch of Bohemian corn mixed with romance and racy living!

The drama students were "front and center" all evening and played every laugh to the last gasp.

John Lecas was in great form

Deems Urquhart added zest

The stage sets, setting and

Lower Classmen

The Sophomores ably upheld their motto, "The Class of Spirit," as they prepared for Color Day and their first class election. Red was the color displayed on their special day of fun and activity. Enthusiasm soared with participation in noon pranks and festivities.

That "in between" class didn't lack drive and know-how. The Juniors came through with a bang every time! Contrary to the usual belief, they were not left in the shadows when the spotlight focused on the Sophs and Seniors. The Junior entry took first place in the class competition which inaugurated our new football field, and again stepped into the limelight on T.V.' As the Seniors bid adieu in June, the Juniors have prepared themselves to climb to the top of the ladder as Tech's leaders

The Junior Prom was filled with enchantment for all who attended as the evening quickly passed and gave way to fond memories. It was fun, it was exciting, it was wonderful!

of Tech's traditions from their upper classmen

The Juniors were an outstanding group. Their presence renewed the lost spirit of Tech, and, although they were second from the top in the school, they were the class which all of Tech admired. Their varied, well promoted, and exciting activities built school spirit.

In the fall semester they triumphed in the football competition by defeating their rival Technites. Doning green, the Juniors made Junior Day a fun-filled occasion ending in an interesting and stimulating assembly.

With the change of semesters came the student body elections. Six of fifteen offices, usually held by Seniors, were taken over by the Juniors who served as capable organizers for the rest of the year.

Spring brought the Junior Prom and picnic which were both well attended and greatly enjoyed. By June the Juniors were ready and eager to take over the position of Seniors.

The Junior officers carefully planned each activity to insure its wholehearted acceptance

DAVE HOSHIDE
Fall President

The Sophomores brought new faces and ideas to Tech. They backed every activity of the school's student body and led some of their own. Spirit was displayed on Sophomore day when every class member wore red.

Through a well planned and supported cake sale, more than $50 was added to the class treasury—the largest amount ever earned by such a project.

The traditional Sophomore dance was held in the spring and turned out to be a wonderful evening. In class government the Sophomores were exceptional. Their officers managed to efficiently direct an unmolded group.

Lunch time was a welcome relief from the day's work—a time for people to relax and discuss the morning's activities.

New Sophomores added sparkle and spirit to Tech

Anguish, joy, frustration, escape . . .
for one frantic, fleeing, ecstatic second you are the darting halfback . . .

in victory and grovel in defeat. But in that moment you, and those around you, are as one . . . bound by humanity, and by the heartbreak and happiness of athletic competition . . .

In every life some rain must fall . . .

Football season is the time when everybody's either a cynic or a pro football scout, and anyone left over is a sophomore. It is a time of victory and defeat, agony and ecstacy. It is a time when Fridays are spent looking forward to games, and Saturday spent trying to forget them.

We took our share of defeats this year, and maybe someone elses also, but we yelled and cried and prayed and fought as a team, and that's all that really counts.

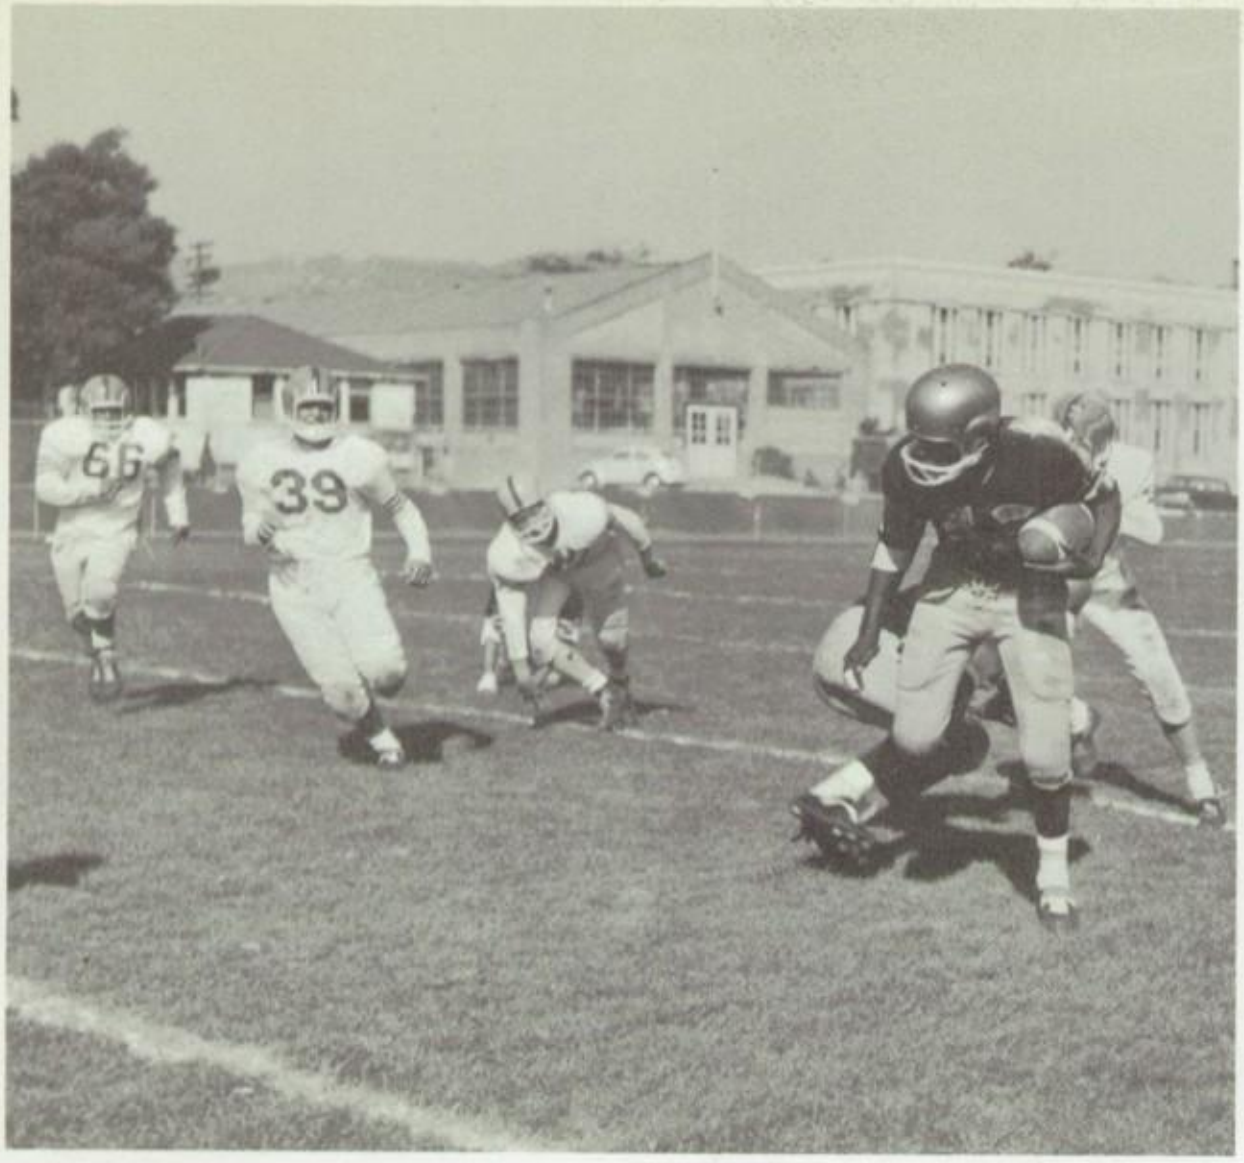
Typical of Tech's frustrations this year, a Skyline player intercepts a pass aimed at Tech halfback Jimmy Phillips, and puts an end to a Tech drive.

With a desperate, finger-tip tackle, Gary Alberts brings down a Fremont Tiger who had dreams of going all the way.

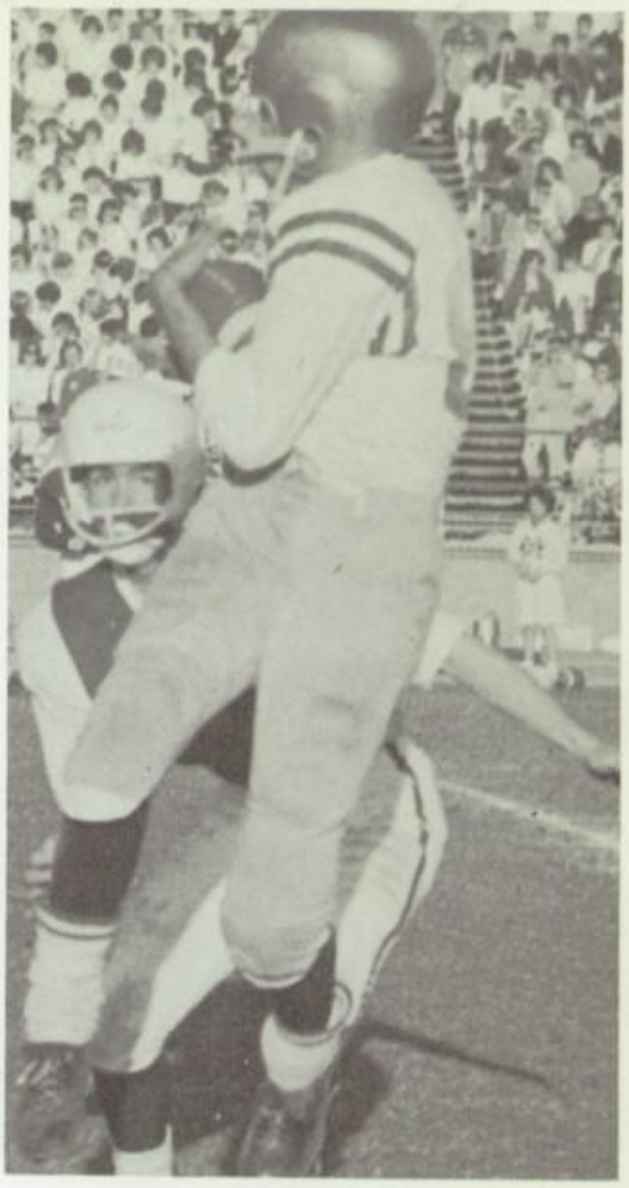
The big decision! A fourth down and short yardage situation portrays all the tense excitement of football. Coach Madera and quarterback Tom Ford plot the assualt.

As Rich Marlais clears the way, halfback Mike Berry cuts in and begins an electrifying run which was to end 60 yards and 6 points later. Tech went on to swamp El Camino 32-0.

Surrounded by converging Bulldogs, an El Camino back looks frantically for help but was soon smothered by an onslaught of blue jerseys.



With no place to go but forward, halfback Jimmy Phillips darts to his right amid the clamor and chaos of the struggles behind him. Action took place in Tech's televised game with Castlemont.



Giving it that extra effort that makes the difference between a good player and a mediocre one, All-City end Frank Tridente grabs this pass for a first down against the Skyline Titans.

Our team was full of spirit, action . . . and Bulldogs

Lined up in the end zone they fought so hard to get into, our Junior Varsity stands in full battle array. It was a long season, full of bruises and battles, but the experience they gained will prove invaluable as Tech continues toward a championship team.

Bulldogs obtain possession of ball as Mickey Johnson and Charles Hawkins remove the temptation of the basketball from members of the Piedmont Clan.

Tech player, Cicero Brown, leaps high to block a shot by Oakland Wildcat.

Sometimes fast, sometimes slow, now hot and invincible, now cold and vulnerable, so it was this year for our Varsity basketball squad.

Our main asset was speed. We had good height, but we depended primarily on our speed.

Though we weren't very successful in the won-lost column, we received recognition and acclaim when Senior star Charles Hawkins finished second in scoring in the entire O.A.L. competition.

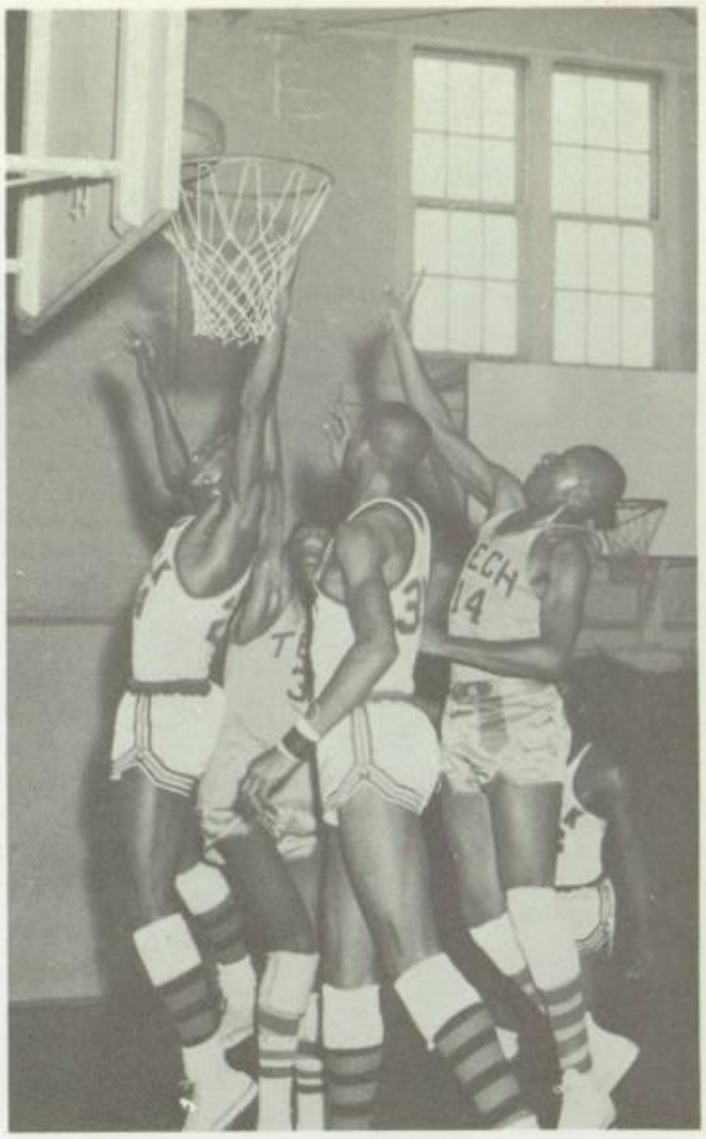
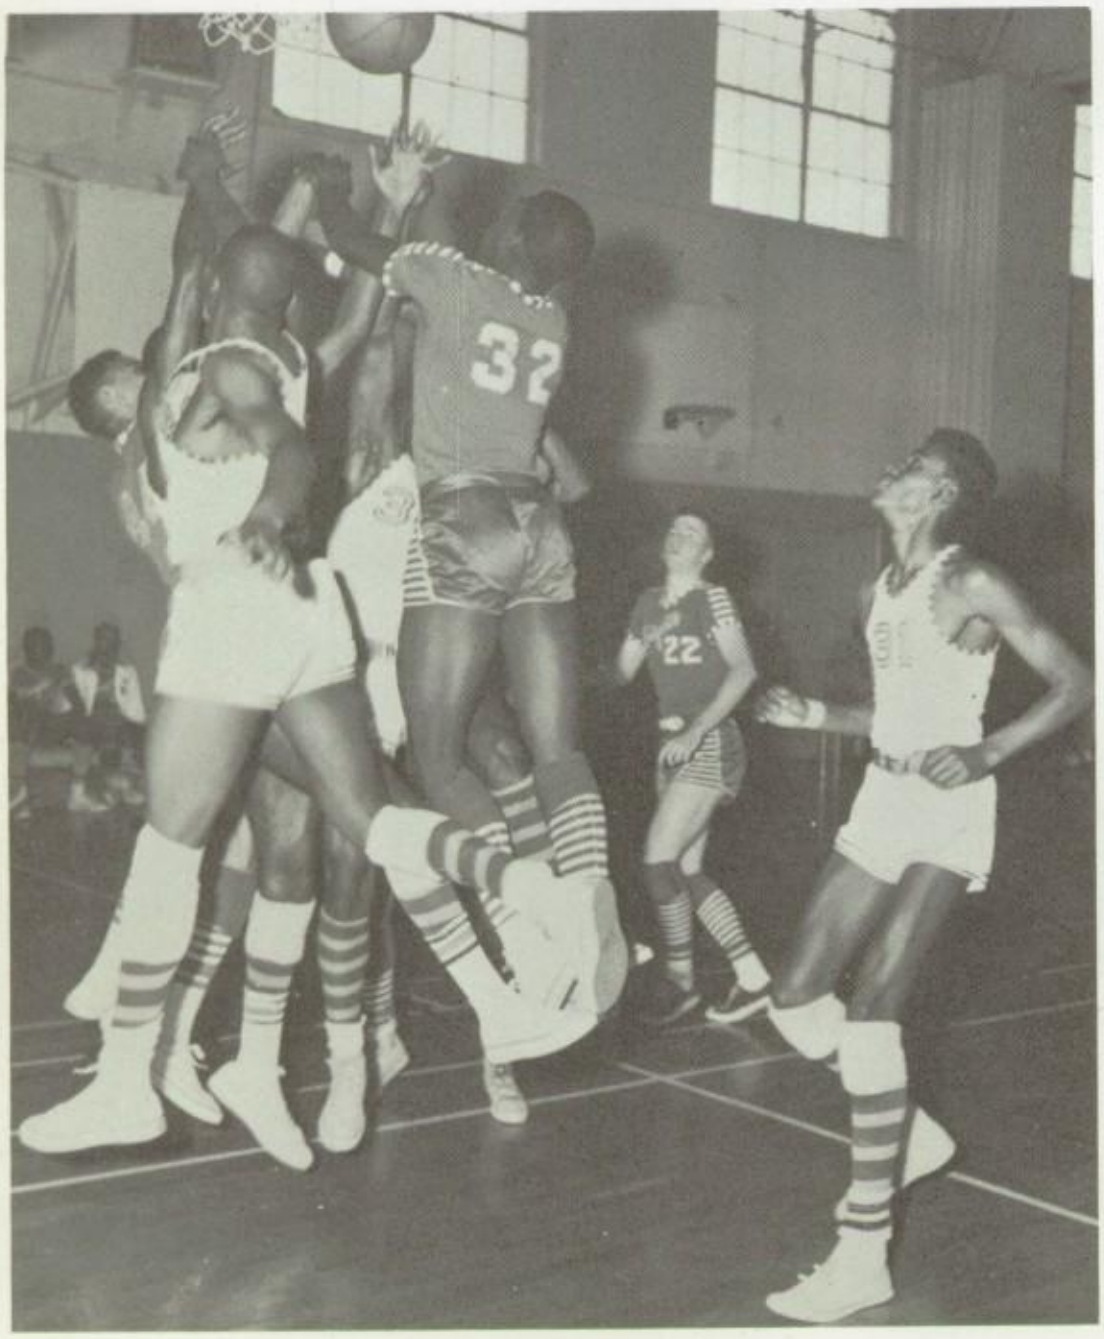
Charles Hawkins disregards an Oakland player and hits on his favorite jumper.

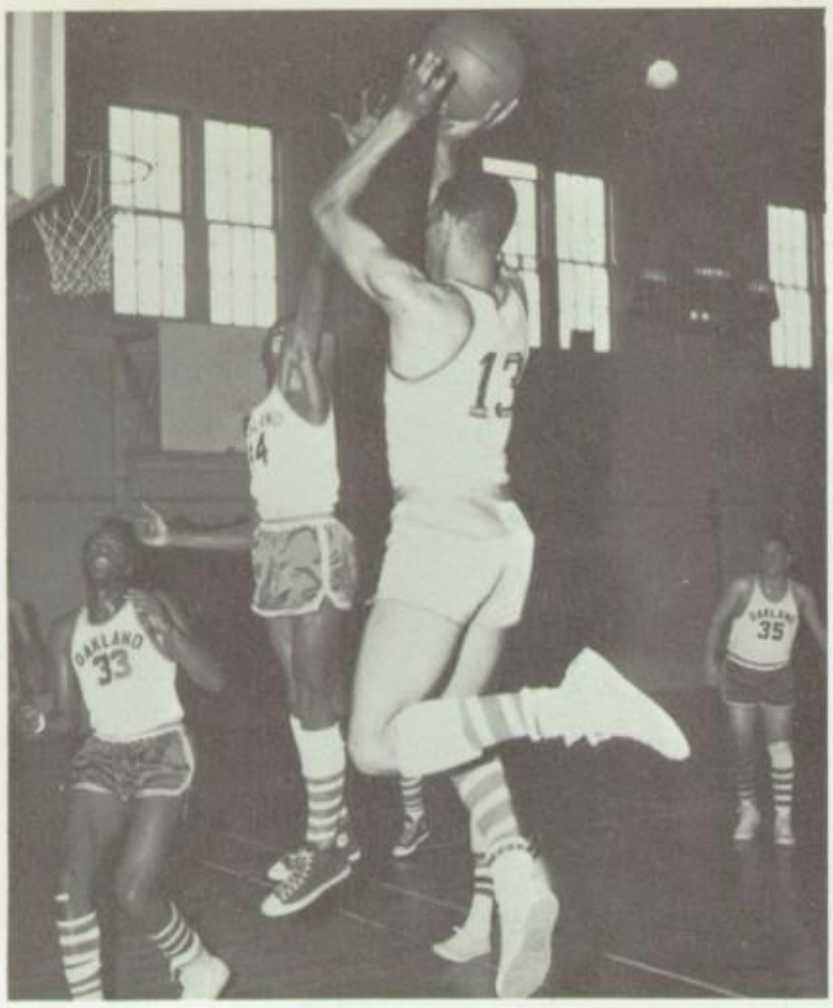


Mickey Johnson and Charles Hawkins battle the eventual O.A.L. champs and Tournament of Champion winners, the McClymond Warriors.



Like some grotesque ballet, Bulldogs and Knights scramble amid a maze of flaying legs and arms.

With a driving jump shot, Cicero Brown scores against the San Lorenzo Rebels.



As a Wildcat leaps in vain, Uke Daniels sets his sights on two points.

Junior Paul Lim drives underneath the basket in an attempt to score against McClymonds.

Timmy Bridges clears a high hurdle.

Showing the strain of his enduring race, miler Bob Van Court rounds the final turn.

Track is a demanding and exhausting sport, combining strength and speed and skill. In the short time interval of a race the athlete pushes himself to the limit of physical endurance, and after, he is left gasping in the ecstacy of victory or the agony of personal defeat.

For the love of Tech

Here is the ring which symbolizes a brotherhood of students working for a common cause. Without the support of an entire people—the school, the home, and the community—the 1963 Talisman would be little more than a dream. Individual efforts labored separately to produce a representation of youth. These people helped and encouraged . . .
